Unfortunately, we don't have much, the body of the hostile have been pretty damage from the explosion, all we have is the left parts of it, mostly burned, but S.I.G.M.A. helped us reconstruct a three-dimensional model to have a better understanding of what we faced.

Judging by their technology level, they should respond to a hierarchical structure. We also found odd weaponry and body armor, but too damaged to be reconstruct, and even something that could be some sort of large dagger with particular ornament, which may, according to CDR. Queen, induce some ancestral society relying on ancient rites.

Their bodies seem to have adapted themselves so that they can manage hand-to-hand combat without any problem. Parts of the skeleton form external bone appendices, creating devastating natural weapons. The morphology of their posterior members confers to them a standing ease like on four legs.

We have also found some hieroglyphic inscriptions on the retrieved ships parts, but not enough to even start to translate anything.

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Schwartz". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.
